DRAFT

Dear Director Oppen:

I write on behalf of the State-Tribal Relations Committee to strongly encourage you to reconsider the department's plan to spend $100,000 of the $250,000 appropriated by the 2015 Legislature for Indian youth suicide prevention grants to hire a contractor. We understand the contractor would be directed to form a coalition to develop a strategic plan. However, the STRC believes this money is better spent providing direct grants to tribes and other entities to support existing suicide prevention programs at the local level.

The STRC respects and appreciates the extensive effort that DPHHS made to consult with and get input from tribes and urban Indian stakeholders on how the funding should be used. While consensus was not found, the STRC heard loudly and repeatedly that direct grants are the preferred choice.

The $250,000 available is a drop in the bucket compared to the monumental challenge of suicide prevention. There is no key. It will take a multi-faceted approach like the grassroots programs designed by tribes and other entities to respond to the specific needs of their Indian communities. Therefore, the STRC believes this funding is best spent in support of those programs, especially those with a holistic, culturally- and/or spiritually-based approach.

With the decline in oil and gas revenues, the state budget is expected to be tight in the 2017 Legislature. It is easy to imagine additional funding will not be available. Director, please don't lose this opportunity to most effectively and efficiently use the 2015 funding. We urge you to reconsider the department's proposed direction and focus on direct grants.

Respectfully,

Senator Jonathan Windy Boy
Chairman
